Appoint Committee to Confer With Other Organizations on Proposition—Hearty Welcome in Store for Visiting Real Estate Agents.

Building operations marking the actual establishment of the home of the National Association of Letter Carriers in Colorado Springs are to be started within a month by the creation of temporary buildings on the site donated by the Merchants association, for the occupancy of 20 members of the association who require immediate care in a sanitarium. The association will be given possession of the site, consisting of 160 acres south of the Printers home, within the next two weeks. Arrangements are now being perfected for the transfer of the deed. Merchants and citizens generally have manifested a desire to contribute to the fund for the site.

$150,000 Already Raised.

National Secretary-Treasurer Brooks Frione and a delegation of members of the Colorado Springs branch of the national association held a conference with the Merchants association at its meeting in the Alamo hotel last night and, after outlining plans for the erection of the temporary buildings, made the announcement that work will begin at an early date on the permanent structures. The buildings and equipment will represent an expenditure of $150,000, the entire amount having been pledged by members of the national organization. In addition the association has levied an assessment for the maintenance of the home.

City of National Homes.

Colorado Springs has earned the proud title of "The City of National Homes," three great organizations having chosen this city as the site of their national beneficiary institutions. Here is located the home of the International Typographical union, an institution to which every union printer and every resident of this city points with pride. The Modern Woodmen of America will begin construction of a magnificent sanitarium, involving the expenditure of several hundred thousand dollars this spring. The latest acquisition is the national home of the National Association of Letter Carriers, an institution that will represent an investment of upwards of $150,000.

Merchants Favor Casino.

That the Merchants association will give its support to the proposition to erect a casino in the city, was evidenced by long discussion of a highly favorable character at last night's meeting. The merchants are of the opinion that the casino, with its broad piazzas, sun parlors and spacious halls for band concerts and entertainments, will prove a valuable asset to the city, in that it will afford a desirable place of amusement for tourists within easy access of the hotels and the residential district. Secretary Frank E. Wulff, Treasurer J. G. Dern and M. B. Clotworthy were appointed a committee to confer with the Chamber of Commerce, Real Estate exchange and the Horticultural society on the proposition.

HOW TO CONTROL THE RAILROADS

THROUGH COMMERCE COMMISSION, SAYS TAFT.

"MORE REGULATION NEEDED"

MUST HAVE STRONG MEN TO SIT ON COMMISSION.

HAS BUSY DAY IN DETROIT

War Secretary Cheered Whenever He Appeared on Streets—Is Accompanied by Ambassador Jusserand and Other Prominent Personages.

DETROIT, Feb. 13.—Secretary of War William H. Taft was the guest today of the Michigan Retail Lumber association and talked for half an hour at the luncheon which was tendered him by the association, upon the moral awakening recently, from business methods which permit illegality and fraud. The address was the culmination of a busy six hours in Detroit.

Arriving in the city at 12 o'clock from Grand Rapids, in company with M. Jusserand, the French ambassador, Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., of Massachusetts, United States Senator William Alden Smith of Michigan, Governor F. M. Warner and several other speakers at last night's Lincoln club banquet in that city, Secretary Taft and the party were driven to the Hotel Pontchartrain. The secretary addressed several thousand people at a public reception, which began immediately after his arrival at the hotel.

Cheered on the Streets.

Throughout his stay in the city the secretary's every appearance on the streets was the signal for cheers and enthusiasm. More than 600 men were gathered about the tables in the banquet room of Harmonie hall to greet Secretary Taft, with several hundred more men and women, its capacity, seated in the galleries. Former United States Senator Thomas W. Palmer presided as toastmaster.

Governor Warner, while voicing the state's welcome to the secretary, was [illegible] tremendous outburst of enthusiasm when he declared that he was convinced that 80 or 90 per cent of the people of Michigan are for Mr. Taft's nomination for the presidency on the Republican ticket. The governor then suggested Governor Guild for the nomination of vice president on the ticket with Secretary Taft.

Jusserand Loudly Welcomed.

Ambassador Jusserand was given a tumultuous welcome when he was presented by the toastmaster for a short address.

The ambassador, after declaring that because of his position he naturally could not meddle in American politics, eulogized the American presidents of the past and the present and said that it was his wish and hope that the country, when it elected another President, would add another glorious name to the already glorious list of names. "I do not know who he will be," said Ambassador Jusserand, "but it seems that you know." Applause interrupted him for several moments.

Secretary Taft spoke of the revelations of the insurance investigation and then of the evils of overissue of stocks and bonds, which he said was obtaining money under false pretenses.

Taking up the question of railroad discriminations and the recent legislation to prevent rebating, he said:

"The truth is, gentlemen, that we have not quite good enough regulation of railways. Other powers ought to be conferred upon the interstate commerce commission. It is said that the interstate commerce commission is not a safe way in which to control the railroads of the country. It is the only way in which we can control them. We must see that we secure strong men to sit upon that commission, who can prove by their administration that it is the proper way.

Ownership Dangerous.

"It is that, or to go to government ownership, with all the state socialism which it involves, and I have no doubt that government ownership of the railways, with the tremendous concentration of power it would involve, would endanger the republic. We have enough concentrated power in Washington now. To increase it, so that the executive should control the enormous body of civil servants which would necessarily follow would result in making a President more powerful than any king who lives today.

"I believe it is possible to enforce the present antitrust law, but we need a new law more specific, to bring all capital within its provisions. I think that today the violation of the law is by no means so fashionable as it was formerly.

People Are Awake.

"Now we are not going to have a business millennium, gentlemen, but we shall have a quickened public conscience and an eye on whether we have business demoralization or have business conducted within the terms of the law. The people have waked up.

"We have just had a panic. Some of the gentlemen who have felt the lash of public opprobrium have been only too glad to attribute it to the legislation to which I have referred. The charge is unfounded. It is due, if students of finance are to be trusted, to the sheer exhaustion of all the [illegible]

DROPS DEAD AT DEPOT

DEATH COMES UNANNOUNCED TO MANITOU MAN.

Charles E. Doolittle Starts on Trip to Kansas but Dies While on Way to Get Ticket.

While about to take the train at the Santa Fe depot at 10:20 o'clock last night on his way to Kansas, Charles E. Doolittle, 60 years of age, of Manitou, dropped dead on the platform. He was picked up by bystanders and carried to the baggage room, but gave no signs of life and it is supposed that death was instantaneous and was due to heart failure. The man, who was unaccompanied, had just stepped off a street car from Manitou and it is supposed was on his way to buy his ticket when death overtook him. The body was removed in the police ambulance to the undertaking rooms of Fairleys & Law and until an early hour this morning efforts were made to reach the man's relatives but without success.

Mr. Doolittle leaves a wife living in Ute Pass, just out of Manitou; a daughter, Mrs. Belle Ford, living in Manitou, and a son, Clarence, living in Colorado City. According to Dr. L. H. Beck of Manitou, who has been treating him, the man was suffering from chronic asthma and heart trouble.

Mr. Doolittle came to Manitou about seven years ago from Kansas and since that time has been employed as a hack driver during the summer months and as a laborer the rest of the time. He owned a farm near Norton, Kan., and was on his way to that place when the end came.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been made, but interment will probably be at Manitou.

Mr. Doolittle was a member of the Colorado City lodge I. O. O. F.

I. T. U. STRIKE IS OFF

MEANS $30,000 A YEAR MORE FOR PRINTERS HOME.

Will Make It Possible to Increase Capacity of Colorado Springs Institution.

Thirty thousand dollars additional revenue will be available for the annual maintainance of the Union Printers home in this city beginning February 29 of this year. This announcement was received yesterday by President Charles M. Carter, of Colorado Springs Typographical union No. 82, in a letter from Secretary-Treasurer J. M. Ramwood of Indianapolis, in which it is stated that the [illegible] assessment is formally declared off.

The union had previously decided that as soon as the strike assessment should cease, an additional levy of 5 cents a month per member should be made to provide funds for the home. This raises the general monthly [illegible] ments to 15 cents a member and provides, from the 50,000 members of the union, a yearly revenue of $30,000. The additional funds are to be used for maintenance purposes and will make possible a large increase in the capacity of the home, should this be necessary at any time.

Old Age Pension System.

The declaring off of the assessment also means that the old age pension system, adopted by a referendum vote, goes into effect on February 29, although the assessment for its support does not become effective until five months from that date. For the purpose of granting a monthly pension of $4 to every member who has passed his sixtieth year and has been a member of the union for [illegible] or more, an assessment of one-half of 1 per cent of all the earnings of [illegible] was made general on the entire membership.

Total Amount Now on Hand Is $464. Many More Contributions Expected.

The "Bob" Womack fund was increased yesterday by $6 in three subscriptions. This raises the total amount now secured to $464. With the fund growing slowly, but surely, it is expected that a considerable sum will be secured for the sufferer.

One of the new subscriptions, for $2, was signed "G. E. N., Secretary;" while from "E. G. D." came a subscription of $2, and from "Cash" $1. No doubt there are many in the city who have delayed sending in contributions for various reasons, but whose gifts will begin to come in within a short time.

ALASKA TROOPS MOVED

WILL PRESERVE ORDER DURING MINING STRIKE.

Part of Trip to Fairbanks Will Be Made on Sleds. Western Federation Involved in Trouble.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—By direction of the President, Acting Secretary Oliver today ordered a company of infantry from Fort Gibbon, in Alaska, to Fairbanks in that territory, to preserve order during the mining strike in that section. This action was taken upon representation from the United States court in Alaska, to the attorney general that the presence of federal troops was needed.

Attorney General Bonaparte promptly brought the matter to the attention of the President and by his instruction, afterwards consulted with Acting Secretary Oliver, who, through General Bell, chief of staff, forwarded the necessary orders for the movement of troops from the military commander at Fort Gibbon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The distance from Fort Gibbon to Fairbanks is 150 miles and the troops will be carried by sleds over the route, which is said to be a very good one. If there is urgent necessity for the presence of the soldiers at Fairbanks, they can get there in four or five days. But under ordinary conditions the trip takes six or seven days. Fairbanks is in the center of a mining country with a population of seven or eight thousand. Persons in Washington familiar with the conditions existing at Fairbanks say the trouble is the outcome of a strike a year or more ago for higher wages and shorter hours for the miners. The operators have resisted and their determination to operate their mines independently of the Western Federation of Miners, it is feared, led to trouble.

MISS CROWELL IS DEAD

SPRINGS PIONEER DIES AT HER HOME IN BOSTON.

News a Severe Shock to Many Residents of This City. Lowbart to Attend Funeral.

Miss Susan E. Crowell, aged 75 years, a pioneer and well-known former resident of Colorado Springs and a sister of the late Benjamin F. Crowell, died last Wednesday afternoon at her home in Boston after a lingering illness. The announcement of her death received here late yesterday after[illegible] by telegraph, came as a severe shock to her many friends. Miss Susan E. Crowell, then an invalid, came to Colorado Springs in 1887 from Boston, the family home, with her sister, Miss Emily Crowell. The brother, Benjamin F. Crowell, who at the time of his death 10 years ago, was vice president of the First National bank, arrived in Colorado Springs in 1890. With the first he was prominently identified with many enterprises for the promotion of the welfare of the city and county. He was county assessor, member of the board of county commissioners.

"SHOULD AMEND SHERMAN LAW"

MUST BE BROUGHT DOWN TO DATE, BEVERIDGE SAYS.

HONEST MEN NEED PROTECTION

"FAIR COMBINATIONS SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED."

INDIANA IS FOR FAIRBANKS

Report That First Few Ballots Only Will Be Cast for Vice President. Resented by Senator in Indianapolis Speech—Plea for Purer Politics.

WABASH, Ind., Feb. 13.—Senator A. J. Beveridge addressed the Indiana Lincoln league of Republican clubs here tonight, delegates being present from all parts of the state. Senator Beveridge said:

"The Indiana delegation is going to Chicago for Vice President Fairbanks. Statements are being sent out that after a few ballots shall have been cast for him the delegation is to be delivered to this or that candidate. This is an insult to the Republicans in this state, which in their name I denounce. The Republicans in Indiana, whom we will represent, are not to be traded or delivered. We will vote for our candidate until he is nominated or until he himself instructs us to vote no longer for him, and if that time ever comes the delegation will not be delivered to anyone. The self-respecting, independent men who compose that delegation will then vote for whom they please. As a body, we are going to Chicago for Mr. Fairbanks and for him alone.

Should Amend Sherman Law.

"It is not Republican to be reminiscent; it is Republican only to be prophetic. Nearly 20 years ago, the Sherman law was enacted. We have traveled a century since then. In that day the organization of industry had just begun and men were alarmed; today we know that the organization of industry, alone, can serve [illegible] that railroad consolidations alone can carry cheaply, safely, quickly, the nation's passengers and freight, and so, while on the one hand we have provided punishment for trusts committing robberies and putting in jail the wealthy anarchists who break the people's laws, we should also provide that honest men may combine for honest business; honest railroad managers consolidate their lines for honest traffic, that the business of the country may go forward. And so the Sherman law must be amended and brought down to date.

"A straight-out revenue tariff gives everything away and gets nothing in return; a straight-out protective tariff gives nothing away and gets nothing in return. We must have a tariff by which we can open the markets of the world—one highly protective tariff to apply to the nations that will not grant us favors in their markets, and another tariff, still protective, for nations that will give us favors in their markets.

"Laws must be passed to help labor. If the laboring man is treated fairly he will not be a menace but a blessing.

Tricks in Politics.

"This period will be called in history the renaissance of American conscience. The tricks of politics no longer deceive the people. It will not do in these days to talk about the flag and human brotherhood; it will not do to denounce our political opponents. You cannot take people's minds in that way from the burning questions of the day. The old and disgraceful political devices can no longer win elections. A ticket nominated by money or intrigue now means certain defeat at the polls.

"Let the people decide; let the people rule, unbought by money, uninfluenced by bribery of any kind. Promises of judicial positions at Indianapolis or at Washington are just as much bribery as the paying over of actual cash.

"Let us have definite policies flowing from high ideals: for the Republican party; pure primaries for the Republican party; unbossed conventions for the Republican party; fearless, truthful, clean candidate for the Republican watchwords. The time has gone by when a [illegible] with the word 'Republican' [illegible] of his own party, "and none was civil, while still in the flesh, so lavishly lauded by [illegible] of the opposing party."

CHAMP CLARK IS HEARD IN HOUSE

MISSOURIAN DISCUSSES THE PRESIDENT.

IS ACCORDED AN OVATION

BOTH DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS CHEER HIM.

SESSION FULL OF INTEREST

General Discussion on Legislative Bill in the House Is Brought to a Close. Several Speeches Are Made on the Issues of the Day.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—General debate on the legislative appropriation bill was brought to a close in the House of Representatives today after a session full of interest. Several speeches were made on the issues of the day, the most notable being by Champ Clark of Missouri who commanded the attention of the House for an hour and a half. Upon the conclusion of his speech he was accorded an ovation by Democrats and Republicans alike.

Mr. Clark arraigned the Republicans for their attitude on the tariff question and said that the announcement that there would be a revision of the tariff after election was a ploy "in preparation of another stupendous confidence game on the people." He defended the President's message and said, whatever his virtues or his faults, the President was not a Democrat.

Other speakers were Messrs. Talbott, Illinois; Tirrell, Massachusetts; Gillett, Massachusetts, and Hammond, Indiana, all of whom discussed various phases of the tariff question.

Belligerent Personage.

In opening, Mr. Clark asserted that a reasonable view should be taken of matters touching the president, but that it had not been done as a rule. "He is such a belligerent personage," he declared, "that his lightest word is a challenge to combat."

The president, he said, could not express his views upon any question under heaven, "even on a subject so prosaic and threadbare as the passing of the state of the weather," without precipitating a row, his extreme adherents asserting that there never had been such a wise man or prophet on earth since Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden with flaming swords, and his extreme enemies vociferating that he knows no more about the weather than a ground hog. The president's whole public life, said Mr. Clark, had been one long succession of [illegible] fights. No man had been more [illegible] by his own party, "and none was civil, while still in the flesh, so lavishly lauded by [illegible] of the opposing party."

WAS SNELL INSANE?

SUFFERED FROM "EXAGGERATED EGO," ALIENIST SAYS.

Letters of Mrs. Hamilton, Read in Court, Coupled Love With Requests for Money.

CLINTON, Ills., Feb. 13.—When trial was resumed here today of the $2,000,000 suit instituted by Richard Snell to break his will made father, Colonel Thomas Snell, more love letters, written to the aged millionaire, were introduced in evidence. The letters were read to the jury, and spectators crowded forward, craning their necks to catch every word. It is said the purpose of reading the letters is to show that Colonel Snell was insane about the woman.

Most of the letters read today are signed simply, "your own little girl," and the others bear no signature. They are admitted as evidence as having been written by Mrs. Laura Hamilton, wife of Rev. R. A. Hamilton. The letters express the ardent love of the writer for the aged millionaire and invariably couple the protestation of affection with the request for money.

Soon after the beginning of the trial, Rev. Mr. Hamilton resigned his pastorate and the couple went away. It is believed they went to Florida. It is rumored that Mrs. Hamilton has suffered from nervous prostration because of the exposure of the letters.

Judge Cochran, who is hearing the case, and who is an ordained Methodist minister and lifelong friend of Rev. Mr. Hamilton, sat with averted face as the letters were read today.

Following the reading of the letters a hypothetical question of 2,800 words was read to Dr. Archibald Church of Chicago, an alienist. The question dealt mainly with the unsigned letters attributed to Mrs. Hamilton.

Dr. Church was asked whether, in his opinion, if a man received such letters and made notations found on them such as "the best letter she has ever written" and "very important" and "this is a sweet one," he might be considered sane.

The question also evoked Colonel Snell's alleged dislike for his son, Richard, and his lavish gifts to Mabelle Snell McNamara of Kansas City, his favorite grandniece.

After hearing the question, Dr. Church said he considered Colonel Snell a paranoiac, subject to "exaggerated ego."

POLICE FIRE ON RIOTERS

Serious Trouble at Bombay Owing to "Charaib" Celebrations.

BOMBAY, Feb. 13.—Serious clashes occurred here this evening, during the course of the celebrations of the Moharram, the first month of the Mohammedan year, arising from disputes between the Sunnites, or orthodox section, and the Shiahs, the second great division of Mohammedans. The police arrested several Sunnites and the mob demanded their release which demand was refused. The mob thereupon stoned the police, injuring two of them. The police commissioner and other European officers fired upon the rioters, killing at least five of them and injuring 40, twenty of whom were seriously wounded.

It is believed that others were killed and their bodies removed by relatives for burial. Eventually the troops were called out and are camping tonight in the streets. The native quarter, however, is almost deserted.

MORE PAY FOR ARMY

GENERAL BELL APPEARS BEFORE HOUSE COMMITTEE.

Presents Schedule, the Adoption of Which He Strongly Urges.—Four Main Features.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—General Bell, chief of staff, U. S. A., today recommended in person to the house committee on military affairs an increased pay schedule for enlisted men of the army, along the lines laid down in the Dick-Hayward bill, but deviating somewhat in scale.

His recommendation contained four distinct features: Creation of the grade of warrant officer, for the promotion of deserving noncommissioned officers, readjustment of initial rates of pay that they shall range from $15 to $42, as against the range on from $18 to $70 in the navy; cash bonus of three months' pay for re-enlistment, and an increase of from $1 to $9 in pay for high attainment in marksmanship. The corresponding increase in the navy is from $2 to $10.

It was estimated by General Bell that if these schedules are adopted, the average increase in pay of enlisted men will be 22.3 per cent, making the average monthly pay $23.84 in the army as against $32 in the navy. In conclusion he said:

"I cannot too strongly urge the adoption of this schedule in its four essential features. If any one of these four features is omitted, the whole plan will be very much weakened and the benefit to the service materially decreased."

General Bell recommended increases of pay for regular army officials as suggested in the Hayward plan.

MURRAY SUCCEEDS RIDGELY?

Present Comptroller of Currency May Accept Presidency of Suspended Kansas City Bank.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—It is stated on what is believed to be good authority that W. B. Ridgely, the comptroller of the currency, has decided to accept the presidency of the suspended National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City when it is reorganized.

Lawrence O. Murray, now assistant secretary of the department of commerce and labor, it is understood, will succeed Mr. Ridgely as comptroller of the currency.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Comptroller of the Currency Willam B. Ridgely, while in town today, discussed with Vice President Frank Vanderlip of the National City bank, plans for the rehabilitation of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. Ridgely could not be reached to affirm the report that he has decided to accept the presidency of the Kansas City institution, but it was learned that until the plans for the reorganization of the bank's stability had been definitely concluded the selection of new officers was considered premature by those most directly concerned. What progress toward rehabilitation had been made today was not made known.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Directors of the American Sugar Refining company today declared the quarterly dividend of 1 3-4 per cent on both the common and the preferred. These dividends are unchanged from the last previous quarter.

sweaty caps in the air and shout. Mr. Clark spoke of the claim that President Roosevelt was better than his party. "Which fact," he estimated, "easily could be established without running any imminent danger of being translated after the manner of Elijah in a chariot of fire by reason of his goodness."

Is Not a Democrat.

"But," he said, "whatever the president's virtues or faults, he was not a Democrat. Occasionally, he said, the [illegible] of Democrats and confusion of Republicans appropriates or absorbs, borrows or seizes a Democratic idea," and from his high coign of vantage urges it with tremendous force; for, he said, the president obeyed to the letter at least one scriptural injunction: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." It was the heavy hand or "big stick" of the president, he declared, that had driven so many Republicans "pell mell into the cave of Adullam, where there is weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth and most profane swearing."

Deserves Much Praise.

"And," he added, "so far as he has advocated Democratic ideas, so far as he mauled wicked Republicans with his mailed fist or thumped them with his big stick, he has deserved the unstinted praise of all lovers of our country."

No one knew, continued Mr. Clark, whether or not the president was a great man. He quoted from an old saying, "count no man happy till he is dead," and said it was a safe and sane rule to pronounce no man great until he was in his grave. "We have not the perspective necessary to fix his status in history," he said, "and it is sheer folly to attempt it. Individually he wished the president will until March 4, 1909, when he hoped the president would quit forever," for no president will ever be elected to a third term till the republic is on its last legs."

Everyone could be honest, he maintained, even if he could not be great, "and," he added, "if you Republican blowings would be candid you would confess that you are not half so much enamored of the president as you seem to be." The Republicans, he declared, grew red in the face lauding the president to the skies, "for he is still the dispenser in chief of pie." A Republican statesman bereft of pie, said he, was "a spectacle to make the angles weep but, he said, when he saw Republicans trying to apotheosize by mere 'big service' it seemed to him the lady doth protest too much."

Referring to the last campaign, Mr. Clark charged that "sundry Republican representatives" sought and obtained from the president certificates of Republican good character, to help them pull through.

Doubtful of Success.

So doubtful were the Republican managers of results in the last campaign, said Mr. Clark, that the president was induced to write "the famous letter" to "my dear Mr. Watson," which, he said, was blanket indorsement of all Republican candidates for congress, "except the unfortunate Mr. Wadsworth." Notwithstanding that letter, he said, the Republican majority in the house had been reduced from 111 to 55. He depicted Senator Cannon, "to whom he referred as "Uncle Joe," studying the returns, repeating the sad exclamation of Pyrrhus, king of Epirus, when surveying a hard won field, who said:

"Another such victory and we are undone!"

Addressing himself still further to the Republicans, Mr. Clark exclaimed: "And the signs of the times indicate that even the ready letter writer in the White house cannot write enough letters between this and the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November to give you another majority in this house." He predicted that on March 4, 1909, a Democratic president would be inaugurated, "backed by such a Democratic majority in this house as will induce even a Republican senate to enact into law the people's will."

Republicans Blamed With Panic.

Coming to the subject of the recent financial disturbance, Mr. Clark laid it at the door of the Republicans. The self-constituted defenders of the president, he said, charged that Harriman and his crowd did it, while on the other hand, "Harriman and his crowd swear that the president and his crowd did it. It did not become an innocent bystander, he asserted, to decide which were the ideal Republicans. "One thing we do know," he said, "and that is that Mr. Harriman was a delegate to the last Republican national convention, which nominated Colonel Roosevelt by a unanimous vote, and that he was a liberal contributor to the Republican campaign fund. It, therefore, he said, did not lie in the mouths of Republicans to disown him, for he was once 'my dear Mr. Harriman,' but now he was another sort of Harriman, beginning with a big, big D. But," he charged, "Harriman was and is a Republican of high degree." He quoted from an utterance of former secretary of the Treasury Shaw that the money stringency of 1907 was the worst the world ever had witnessed, but he said Mr. Shaw might truthfully have added: "It is a Republican panic, and gives the lie direct to the Republican platform declaration of 1904, that a Republican tariff is always followed by business prosperity and a Democratic tariff by business adversity." That fake is exploded."

Hepburn's Threats.

Much attention was paid by Mr. Clark to the charge that Mr. Hepburn had threatened to "run over" the leaders of the house. That threat, he declared, already had brought into line Mr. Payne of New York, the majority leader, who announced there would be tariff revision. "If," he said, with referring to Mr. Hepburn, "he will be kind enough to let us know when he intends to start his roller over the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Dalzell, and over 'Uncle Joe,' to do it, we are there, he can safely count a full house and an enthusiastic [illegible]." He referred to Mr. Hepburn as "the defender of the faith."

After paying fine at Mr. Payne's result in the house, Mr. Clark turned his attention to Mr. Dalzell. One-third of Mr. Payne's speech, he declared, had been delivered in a whisper, "apparently for the sole benefit and spiritual information of Mr. Dalzell. If there was any person about the capitol," said Mr. Clark, "who was in sore need of abundant spiritual instruction as to the new Republican evangel of the tariff revision," it was Mr. Dalzell.

A Fixed Star.

"He is a fixed star of portentous magnitude in the constellation of stand-patters," he declared. "He is the stand-pat sheaf to which all other stand-pat sheaves do obeisance, even as Joseph saw things happen in his dream. He is to all stand-patters what Warwick was to the peers of the magicians." He remarked that should Mr. Dalzell ever rise in his place in the house and unequivocally declare that he was earnestly in favor of general tariff revision downward, "the angelic choir should break forth in full chorus: 'Sound the glad timbrel o'er land and o'er sea.'

Dalzell is converted, the country is free."

"Until he does that," continued Mr. Clark, "I shall entertain grave doubts as to the sincerity of these new advocates of tariff revision."

Mr. Clark believed that one-third of all Republicans were honestly in favor of revising the tariff downward, and, referring to the declaration of Mr. Payne in favor of a maximum and a minimum tariff, asked if Mr. Payne was in favor of Mr. Williams' proposition to make the tariff 45 per cent of the Dingley rates, or the proposition of former Representative McCleary, "to make the Dingley rates the minimum and the maximum blue vault of heaven."

"There is no doubt but that European investors in our securities have been frightened by the revelations of dishonesty which have been shown of late in many of our large institutions. But is the man who pointed out the dishonesty to be charged with this lack of confidence? It is not necessary to argue."

SPANKING MAY BE REVIVED

New York Schools May Return to Old-Fashioned Method of Punishing Unruly Pupils.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. Unless the board of education goes contrary to the recommendations of its special committee on the advisability of restoring corporal punishment to the public school system, insubordinate youngsters may be disciplined with old-fashioned spanking hereafter. The board will hold a special meeting March 4 to consider the report of the special committee.

After receiving answers from 470 superintendents and principals of New York city schools, as well as from outside pedagogues, to a set of questions designed to bring out a popular expression on the subject, the special committee today submitted its report to the board. Part of the report was as follows:

"This committee is of the opinion that corporal punishment should be permitted in our schools, in extreme cases only, under strict regulations, and that it should be administered by the principal with the written consent of the parents or else by a parent in the presence of the principal. Where parents refuse to give their consent or refuse to punish a child themselves, in the presence of the principal, we believe the principal should at once report such child to the city superintendent for suspension and when suspended the child should be sent to a truant school or to a school for incorrigibles."

Out of the 470 answers, 270 favored the restoration of corporal punishment, while 200 voted against it.

MISSISSIPPI GOES DRY.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 13.—The statutory prohibition bill, which was the special order of the day in the Senate, was passed by a vote of 36 to 34. Consideration of the bill provoked debate lasting several hours and participated in by almost the entire body. When it finally came to a vote, only four dissenting votes were cast. The bill provides that all licenses now in existence in the state shall expire on December 31.

WAS A GAY DECEIVER

BOGUS AMERICAN SENT TO PRISON IN BERLIN.

Was Guilty of Wholesale Marriage Swindles.—Claimed to Be Wealthy.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—A bogus American, "Colonel" Schlemangk, has been sentenced by the criminal court to three years' imprisonment. The loss of his civil rights for five years after his release, and to perpetual police supervision as well as to pay a fine of $500, Schlemangk having been convicted of [illegible] marriage swindles by reason of an advertisement whereby he succeeded in obtaining considerable sums of money from women.

He was born in Germany, but served in the United States army, was promoted to a noncommissioned officer, but finally deserted. He asserted that he was a colonel in the American army and was acting as military attache at the American embassy in Berlin. By the display of fraudulent bills and checks to the face value of millions, he managed to delude several women into seeking a brilliant marriage. The evidence in the courts showed that the man had already served terms in the penitentiary, where he made the acquaintance of a notorious criminal, Amandus Hoppe, who assisted him to carrying out his schemes. The latter was sentenced to six months in prison as an accomplice.

POSTAL LAW VIOLATED

CHARGE BROUGHT AGAINST AMERICAN EXPRESS CO.

First Gun Fired in Cincinnati in Campaign to Be Waged by the Government.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 13.—Violation of the postal laws, by carrying first-class mail matter was charged against the American Express company in a suit filed in the United States district court today by District Attorney McPherson.

This suit was the first gun in a campaign which the government purposes to wage against common carriers for carrying first class mail matter, contrary to law. In the information, which Attorney McPherson filed, he alleges that the American Express company, on January 6 carried a letter from Belton, Tex., to Cincinnati. The letter was from Mrs. Will Brown of Belton, and in it she ordered from a glove company twelve pairs of gloves and inclosed an express money order for $2.47 in payment. Attorney McPherson claims the letter did not relate to the business of the express company and that the envelope did not bear a postage stamp as required by law. The penalty for violation of this provision of the federal statutes is $100.

Colonel Holmes, postoffice inspector in charge, said:

"The government is very jealous of its right to carry the mails, and insists on it always. When public carriers carry letters not bearing postage stamps and not pertaining to government waged war against carrying postage money from the sale of stamps.

"About four or five years ago, the government waged war against carriers for such an offense. It is the opinion of the government officials that common carriers are becoming too lax in reference to carrying mail matter not properly stamped, and that prosecution of a few cases is necessary to bring to their attention the fact that they are violating the law."

TOPEKA, Kas., Feb. 13.—The state board of railroad commissioners will tomorrow issue its order for a reduction and general change in freight rates. The order is to go into effect April 13. The railroads did not contest the order before the board, but will, it is understood, fight it in the courts.

MOTHER CAUSED BABE'S DEATH

Coroner's Jury Clears Part of Fort Morgan Mystery—Act May Have Been Result of Carelessness.

FORT MORGAN, Colo., Feb. 13.—The coroner's jury investigating the death of the babe found lying near the railroad tracks at Wiggins, Colo., a week ago today found that the child's mother, Lotta Barrett of Denver, who confessed that the child washers and that she had dropped it from a window, was the cause of the babe's death, but that whether it was intentionally or carelessly done, the evidence did not decide. The mother of the babe was given over to Deputy Sheriff Burkett of Denver and will be taken to Denver. What disposition will be made of her remains to be determined.

GOLDFIELD STRIKE STILL ON

Mine Operators Will Not Recognize Western Federation as Organization—Miner Blown Up.

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Feb. 13.—Following a lengthy conference with local leaders of the miners union today, C. E. Mahoney, vice president of the Western Federation of Miners, declared that the question of calling off the strike in Goldfield was not considered.

Mahoney said, however, that he was willing to meet the mine operators, in an effort to come to some terms of settlement.

Walton E. Dowlin, vice president of the operators association, in a statement today said the operators would not recognize the Western Federation as an organization. A large squad of state police is expected to arrive in the camp within a few days.

A working miner of the camp was nearly blown to his death tonight by a charge of dynamite which had been placed in his sleeve and which exploded as he was about to kindle a fire. His cabin was completely wrecked.

Deputy Sheriff Patello left tonight for Louisiana with his prisoner, who waived requisition. Two others under arrest implicated Peccorino.

PLAY MAKES BIG HIT

"THE MAN OF THE HOUR" DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE.

Theme One That Appeals Strongly to Everybody—Company Good and Well Balanced.

"The Man of the Hour" drew a fashionable and interesting audience to the Opera House last evening almost spellbound. While its observant men and women, drawn by a name and by known characteristics, saw and heard a story which everybody sees and hears somewhere in ordinary life, with a theme so vital to every American citizen who is in earnest in his desire for cleaner politics, Broadhurst's play appeals strongly to everyone. After seeing "The Man of the Hour" one can understand why New York and other large cities have flocked to and kept it so long in their theaters, why even a small city in Illinois has seen the play three times and now wants it again, and is going to get it because of the great patronage given it on former occasions. If it should come back to this city, even within the next 60 days, the Opera House could not hold the people who would want to see it. It is a play which is bound to have a long life if properly presented.

A Strong Plot.

Its plot deals with the corporation in politics. A young man of wealth and position is nominated by a boss for the position of mayor and is elected. The boss tries to use him to put through a perpetual franchise for a street railway, but finds the young man sticking strongly to his ideas of right and wrong. In his efforts to shake the mayor in his determination to veto the bill the boss offers money, then political advancement, and, finally, as a last card, tricks him into a misunderstanding with the girl he loves. But in the face of every difficulty and all temptations, the mayor remains obdurate. He follows the line of duty without regard to his own personal welfare. He vetoes the bill and in the end wins the girl and triumphs over his enemies. There is no use pointing out the moral, for the moral is plain. He does what is right at the risk of disgracing his dead father, at the risk of losing the one woman in the whole world, and at the risk of being killed politically.

Theme Well Handled.

George Broadhurst, the author, is better known for his farces, mostly made-to-order pieces. "The Man of the Hour" is his first success on a serious theme, and has been handled well. The plot is developed consistently, and interests. Together with the clean-cut characters, which are live beings, drawn by a man who knows character, and the theme, the play grips the audience. The lines are bright and in many places sparkling. Broadhurst's next effort in this line is awaited with interest.

The play, however, is not the whole thing, for were it played poorly, a great part of the effect would be lost. That it is played so admirably by a company of exceptionally fine ability, is a distinct pleasure. The company which appeared here is one of four now playing it, and was the one which was in New York last summer.

Many Strong Characters

The man of the hour is the mayor, but the strongest character is that of Harrigan, the boss, who is closely rivaled by the alderman, Phelan. Louis Hendricks was Harrigan and was a living picture of the boss. His bullying, his importance, his "divine right" were all clearly brought out. Felix Haney, the Phelan of last night, won considerable deserved applause as the man who opposed Harrigan in the matter of the franchise, not because of the question of mere right and wrong, but because he was a personal enemy of the boss. He gave the Irish alderman a splendid finish and his triumph was brought out completely. Lionel Adams was the mayor and was generally effective. His scenes with the boss wherein he showed his perfect composure, were brilliantly effective.

J. R. Armstrong, as the man financially interested in the passing of the bill, was generally good. T. L. Davis in the role of Gibbs, the man who played false to everybody, even to his own friends, gave a splendid delineation of that character, bringing out all the sneakiness and low-down meanness in the part. Everett Butterfield, as Perry, a pleasing young chap with not a serious thought in the world except of the girl he loves, but a pleasure-loving young man, did an extremely fine piece of work in this role. B. D. Cain, as Thompson, whose father had been ruined by Wainwright, made a splendid effect out of his one scene in the last act where he confronts Wainwright as the victor, after bringing about the latter's ruin.

Woman Characters Good.

Ruby Bridges, a pretty woman of pleasing appearance, did well as the young girl loved by the mayor, and in her few moments of emotional work, showed that her ability is fully up to the demands of the role. Cynthia Harrison, played by Jane Aubrey, made much out of little. Miss Mabel Brandon, as the mayor's mother, who advised him to do right no matter what the consequences were, was exceptionally good, especially in her scene with her son. The rest of the cast was adequate.

The production of the play was meritorious. The staging was very well done, in fact, better than ordinarily seen on the road. The full sets were staged handsomely, and were all that could be desired. A couple of the scenes were exceptionally good.

INLAND WATERWAYS IMPROVEMENT.

SENATOR KNOX'S influence as a member of the upper branch of Congress and his prominence as a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination add weight to his strong plea for the permanent improvement of rivers and harbors, made in his Lincoln day speech at Pittsburg. The discussion about the recent revival of interest in a deep channel for the Mississippi River has brought out clearly the fact that this subject, considered in its broadest aspect, is too important to be longer neglected as it has been in the past. Every year for several decades Congress has made a big appropriation for the improvement of rivers and harbors—big in one sense and little in another. The appropriations have never been large enough to permit of the systematic pursuance of a plan of improvement which would yield results of permanent value, but nevertheless they have amounted to many millions of dollars, and the lack of system has made the expenditures almost ineffective.

For instance, much work has been done on the lower Mississippi in the way of deepening the channel and constructing works designed to protect the banks from overflows. The engineers would start work with a fixed appropriation, sufficient to carry on operations for a year, and expecting to get additional sums for their completion. Then Congress would get disgusted with the whole business and withhold the amounts necessary to make the initial work effective. Result—the next time the Father of Waters got on a rampage everything represented by that expenditure of millions would be washed away, and the river would be in no better condition for navigation than before.

SYSTEMATIC WORK IS NEEDED.

It is against this wasteful, haphazard method of river "improvement" that Senator Knox directs a portion of his argument. He rightly contends that the full benefit of the Panama Canal cannot be realized unless our seaports and inland waterways systems are developed to the extent of their possibilities. This would mean the dredging of harbors to a depth of at least 35 feet and the opening for commerce of a 12-foot channel from the Lakes to the Gulf, including the deepening of the Chicago Drainage Canal to permit its use for freight shipments. He also recommends the construction of a canal connecting Lake Erie with the upper Ohio River, probably by way of Pittsburg.

An undertaking of such magnitude would of course be tremendously costly, but its economic value is indicated by the statement that it costs about 35 per cent more to ship coal by rail from Pittsburg to Lake Erie, 150 miles, than it does to ship it by water from Pittsburg to New Orleans, a distance of 2,000 miles.

Five hundred million dollars is the estimated cost of this system of waterways and Congress will probably be urged to devise a definite plan whereby the work can be done with annual instalments of $50,000,000. As is the case in all great engineering enterprises—the Panama Canal, for example—the actual cost would doubtless be far more than the first estimates, but even so there can be little doubt that the benefits would justify the expenditures.

NEW YORK TO PARIS BY AUTO.

THE marvels of yesterday become the commonplaces of today. Jules Verne's imaginary trip around the world in eighty days was regarded as possible only in the mind of a fiction writer, until Nellie Bly, a newspaper correspondent, actually circled the globe in much less time. Another of Verne's wonderful creations, the Nautilus, the submarine craft which carried its adventurous crew on many a hair-raising voyage along the bottom of the sea, has since become a reality in every navy in the world, and some of the most up-to-date submarine boats perform feats that never occurred even in Verne's vivid imagination. Means of transportation by land and sea are steadily being perfected, and the advent of each new record-breaking ocean liner or fast express train reduces by [illegible] hours and minutes the distance around the globe. So many marvelous things have occurred in the last few years in the realms of science and industry that it is unsafe to predict the failure of any new invention, or appliance, or scientific [illegible] that may be announced.

It is much by way of preface to the remark that the attempt to travel by automobile from New York to Paris, by way of Bering Straits, though fantastic, may not be as impossible as it seems. In view of difficulty it would be hard to conceive [illegible] that attends it, unless it be the [illegible] attempt to reach the North Pole by airship. The first portion of the trip, from New York to [illegible], is difficult, admittedly, inasmuch as it is [illegible] painted, but it is a [illegible] holiday excursion [illegible] with the kind of going to be encountered in Alaska and Siberia. The journey across Russia will be made by auto [illegible] been made, [illegible] the world's [illegible] look for [illegible] until they reach Valdez, [illegible] of Kit Carson [illegible] Thus [illegible] the Strait [illegible] ing of Being Straits by boat, followed by the 11,000-mile effort to reach Paris.

DIFFICULTIES OF THE JOURNEY ACROSS ASIA.

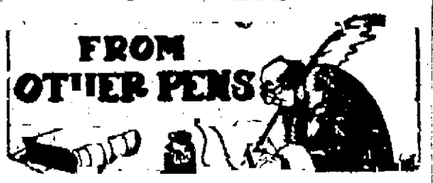
By far the greater part of the road lies across the frozen tundras of Siberia. In both Alaska and Siberia there will be thousands of miles of the course where the contestants must make their own roads. The mere courage required for such an undertaking excites admiration, but if courage were the only thing necessary to complete the course all of the contestants would finish in good order, for each machine is manned by men who realize that they are taking their lives in their hands. But the real difficulty is in the character of the course to be traveled, and the issue will depend entirely on the strength and mechanical excellence of the machines.

It is hard to see what benefit, if any, would follow the successful completion of this course. It would be useful only as a test of endurance. It is not an exploring expedition nor could it open up any new highway of travel. It is undertaken merely to justify the faith of automobile manufacturers in the powers of their machines, and the effort is not likely to be repeated even if one or more of the contestants succeeds in finishing the course.

It is announced that Russia's new naval program contemplates the building of five strong fleets, two of which will be stationed in the Pacific, two in the Baltic, and one in the Black Sea. The estimated cost is between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000, and the Duma is to be asked to vote the entire sum in a lump. All this money for a futile effort to regain lost prestige, and meanwhile millions of Russian peasants live on the verge of starvation!

Senator Foraker says now that he knew several weeks ago that he was going to be everlastingly licked in the Ohio primaries. It is noticeable though that he didn't give out any announcements to that effect before the primaries were held.

Five billions, two hundred ninety-eight million, seven hundred ninety thousand, five hundred twenty-three cigarettes were manufactured in the United States last year. Draw whatever moral you like.



BUSINESS FOR EX-PRESIDENTS.

The question "What shall we do with our ex-presidents?" need no longer weary the public. The magazines will keep them busy.

COMFORT FOR WOMEN.

From the New York World.

No woman need now regard herself as passe at 50. Ripened charms should then be at their meridian. Society, so far from relegating her to the background, ignores the flight of years in a belle of past conquests. In the words of a competent London observer, "there has been a complete disappearance of the middle-aged woman. The social world seems now to be made up of girls, young married women and old ladies who are great-grandmothers. Every one is fresh and no one has wrinkles. Every one has bright eyes, a flower face and a slender form and every one is dressed to perfection, the same style suiting equally well the girl of 15 and her mother." A woman will always be as young as she looks, and to look 25 at 40, thanks to the preservative art of the beauty specialist and the dress maker, is no longer difficult.

THE MOOR OF TODAY.

From the Philadelphia Telegraph.

If the usurping sultan of Morocco succeeds in thoroughly arousing the religious fanaticism of the tribes, some desperate fighting will fall to the share of France and Spain. Not one Christian has been in the interior of Morocco, or who is not well acquainted with conditions there, can appreciate the bigotry of the Moor and the mediæval quality of the hatred felt for Christians. The Moor who lives outside of the direct influence of civilization is the same kind of a fighting man as his ancestor who descended on Spain with the sword in one hand and the Koran in the other and founded an empire there. The only difference between a twelfth or thirteenth century Moor and the tribesman of today is that the former was a cultured and learned man and the latter is an ignorant, barbarian robber, to whom war and pillage are the first and most enjoyable pursuits of existence.

NEEDS AND SHAMS.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Tests in New York, the objective point of a large number of the unemployed who travel to better their condition, correspond with the observations made in other cities. The general opinion of the observers is that, though there may be thousands of men out of work, very few appear to ask for relief. The men who walk the streets and reject assistance are nearly always no more than plain tramps. They disappear when work is offered, or work just long enough to satisfy immediate appetite, perhaps for food, more likely for drink.

It is wrong to infer that there is no legitimate call upon friendliness. More or less real trouble is abroad. That there is no obtrusive army of the honest homeless is an argument for contributions to the regular charity associations, whose officials know where the homes in distress are to be found. In the large cities it takes special knowledge to administer aid with judgment. Infallibly the proper rule is to make contributions through that channel, unless the giver is sure of the honest need when he makes his gift personally.

THE INAUGURATION DATE.

From the New York Times.

Once every four years a proposition to amend the United States constitution to advance the date of the inauguration becomes a subject of more or less spirited discussion in Washington. The excuse is that the weather is apt to be inclement about March 4. It is needless to say that good weather cannot be secured by constitutional amendment, but the Washington idea is that the weather by the latter part of April is likely to be pleasant in the capital. That would mean larger crowds. The hotels and shops would have larger profits.

The cold and rain on March 4 have often made the outdoor ceremonies of the inauguration discomforting and dangerous to health. But there is no reason why the President should not take the oath of office in the room of the supreme court. There is no reason why he should stand bareheaded out of doors and make a speech which only a few persons in the many thousands crowded about the capitol can hear. He could have his military escort, as now, to and from the capitol.

March 4 is the constitutional date of the inauguration and there is no good reason for prolonging the term of any one president by changing it. There would be more dignity and good sense in the indoor inauguration. If Washington wants a festival of some sort in the spring, and not even Paris in May is a more delightful place than our capital in late April, there is time enough there to devise one. MYSTIFIED SPELLING.

From the New York Tribune.

Only a short time ago the Simplified Spelling Board was reported to have decided that it would remodel the English language gradually, so that none save the most tightly stuck-in-the-rut would resist the gentle, even pressure of phonetic reform. But, alas! the board now appears to be going the way of other revolutionists who find a large, unwilling public thwarting their ideals; it is chafing under the restraint of popular opinion, and, consumed with the desire to see great strides taken toward perfect orthography, resorts to bomb throwing and terrorism generally. Its second list of revised words has just appeared, and among the seventy-five novelties which it hurls at the head of the innocent public there are several infernal machines expressly calculated to blast out a deep chasm between English literature and English dictionaries. The chief purpose of phonetic spelling being to assist the feeble minded and the ignorant, we should like to regard the movement as a charitable one, kindred to the [illegible] literary canons; nevertheless, here, as in other notable instances, gross cruelties are committed in the name of mercy.

"Ake," which displaces "ache," is truly painful, as perhaps an ache should be. It reduces Dr. Aked to a past participle, thus doing grave injustice to the distinguished pastor and his native tongue at one blow. The simplifiers divide New York City into "boros" which are decidedly unphonetic boroughs, but who could expect that simplified spelling would be absolutely consistent in its strivings toward ideal phoneticism? Is not the most highly simplified style of spelling that which is complicated and restrained by no rules? We should like to know who "ead" the board on to transform an egg into an "eg." Doubtless an "eg" with only one "g" will smell as sweet, ceteris paribus, but as a biliteral it seems to have lost one of its three component parts, yolk, white or shell. Many persons may approve heartily of the change from "debt" to "det;" for in these hard times it is a kindly act on the part of a richly endowed board to reduce the debt of all English spelling people. This benevolent deed, it is probably hoped, will soon make English the universal language and rob "foren" of all meaning. Until that day comes, however, "foren" will remain a happy substitute for "foreign," expressing in its alien spelling the meaning of the word. The rude shock caused by the displacement of "limb" by "lim," "numb" by "num" and "tongue" by "tung" is partly absorbed by the thought that in changing "ghost" to "gost" the board has robbed spooks of all their terror. A "gost" is no more awesome than a gosling. Thus does reason triumph over superstition. As we contemplate the seventy-five revisions in conjunction with the announcement that twenty thousand (and) odd writers of English have sworn fealty to the board's mystified spelling fear and horror mingled with curious speculations over the possibility of witnessing in the near future a confusion of pens more disastrous than the mythical confusion of tongues.

A MEMORIAL OF DISHONOR.

From the Kansas City Star.

The state of Pennsylvania is in a dilemma. A former and recent legislature provided for the making of a statue of the late Matthew Stanley Quay, and voted an appropriation, to be taken out of the money of the people of the state, which Quay had helped to plunder, to pay for the monument.

Since that scandalously brazen act there has been an awakening in Pennsylvania. The state capital scandal has been exposed and the traitors responsible for it are on their way to trial. A new and better state administration has been brought about. Meanwhile the sculptor has finished his work and the statue is ready for its pedestal.

Now comes the question of placing it, as site having been designated in the act providing for the memorial. There is a general feeling of revulsion against its erection. It is protested that such a statue would now misrepresent the people of Pennsylvania. It would be an affront to their new principles and purposes. Its erection would be a humiliating gratuity, as distinguished from the capitol building at Harrisburg, which, at least, has its uses, even if it is a monument of graft and theft.

Under the circumstances of Pennsylvania's awakening it seems almost incredible that the effigy of Quay should find a permanent public place, since even a returned public sentiment could hardly consent to placing the statue before the people in stone.

Our Trade Successes Abroad

When Yankee Energy Is Coupled With a Determination to Find Out What People Want and Cater to Them, America Will Come Into Her Own as the Leader of Foreign Trade.

Frederic J. Haskin in the New York Globe.

OUR many failures in the field of foreign trade have already began to teach us a different line of procedure. The patient work of our consuls is beginning at last to bear fruit. The American consular service is acknowledged to be the best in the world, and after it has been patterned the service of other nations. It has been discouraging to these earnest men, however, to see their reports ignored, their suggestions in regard to trade opportunities set aside, and billions of dollars diverted to other countries when a little effort on the part of America's manufacturers would have brought that sum into American coffers.

The failures we have made caused a sudden awakening, and already the ubiquitous Yankee drummer is making himself known in remote countries, and is beginning to modify his ideas to suit those of his prospective purchasers. He is ready to learn the languages of the countries with which he must trade, and to sell the goods the people want. He can soon laugh at the young fellow who insisted on trying to sell a cargo of heating stoves in Para, Brazil, and at the enterprising youth who invested his all in corn salve to be sold the barefoot Japanese. He is learning to study climatic conditions and the customs and needs of a people before unloading his wares on them.

Sale of Sewing Machines.

American salesmen have gone after trade, and they are going to get it. There is the Singer Sewing Machine company, for instance, whose wares are countless more widely disseminated throughout the world than those of any other manufacturing concern in existence. The salesmen of this company have penetrated every country on the globe, and in the heart of Morocco the Singer sewing machine is the only evidence of American enterprise. The salesmen studied the situation there, too, and the machines they ordered for the use of the women in Fez were small ones turned by hand power and suited to operators who sat upon the floor.

A young American salesman in Cuba had a proprietary medicine that he was anxious to bring to the notice of the people. It was cure for skin diseases, and as a large percentage of the population he saw was afflicted that way, he felt he had a bonanza if he could only bring it to their notice. A million and a half prospective customers were on the island, he felt they needed his wares, but how to make them understand the character of the stuff he did not know. He was willing to advertise, and had plenty of money to spend that way, but what would be the use of printing advertisements that many could not read? Billboard advertising was out of the question in a land where heavy tropical rains and a torrid sun put the best posters out of commission in a short time. He brought his Yankee ingenuity to bear on the subject. "Curiosity must be aroused somehow, and as cod liver oil was one of the chief ingredients, he decided to use the picture of a fish in some way. But how? The Cubans are great on bull fights, and thousands gather every night on the plaza to hear the music. He devised a series of pictures to be thrown on screens by flashlight, and between inspiring scenes of bull fights and skirt dances there appeared time and again each night a giant fish. There was nothing to explain the reason for this fish, and curiosity soon reached a white heat. Then questions began to be asked, and in a short while the clever Yankee's medicine was in general demand.

One Book Agent.

A young man experienced in selling books in the United States found the trade overworked here, and decided to go abroad with his wares. He got information on the markets and the tastes of South American countries, invested his all in a stock of books, and set out for his new territory. At a South American port he stood on the steamship deck watching the discharging of the cargo. The water was shallow in the harbor, and the cargo was landed on barges and taken ashore. One box of his stock of books was swung out over the barge when a break in the hoisting machinery and a roll of the sea combined to drop it overboard. Fellow passengers gathered around the young man to offer sympathy, for they knew of his venture, and felt that the books were a loss. He merely smiled and advised that the box be grappled for. He then explained that he had studied the situation, had profited by the experience of others, and had packed his books in such a fashion that they were proof against all such contingencies. Each book was sealed in oil paper, wrapped in oilcloth, and packed in waterproof boxes. He knew that many of the books would be sent on mule-back over long trails through sections subject to tropical storms, and they were too valuable to be exposed to any risks. Needless to say, that man made good on his venture. He knew how to place his wares, too. His work at home had taught him the value of advertising and the commercial value of a big man's recommendation. He interested the president and the government officials, and their orders were equal to an unqualified indorsement of the books.

An American who was a traveling salesman for a mercantile firm found himself suddenly stranded in an Oriental city with remittances from home long overdue. Bills loomed to a prodigious height before him. A firm out there that had just failed in business had among its assets a cash register. The salesman had an idea that the cash register might take. He got permission to put it in a little store that had a large Chinese patronage. Sure enough a Chinaman soon noticed it and became curious. The mechanism appealed to him. "This machine," he great idea," the wily Mongolian declared, "he watch my partner while I go take walk." Suspicion is a leading trait in Chinese character, partners in business generally fearing each other. The news of the vigilant machine spread, the American began taking orders for its sale, and established a flourishing trade.

What Took the Native.

England for a long time had an extensive trade in cloths with the natives of the Congo country. An enterprising American manufacturer found he could make the same cloth cheaper and sent down an expert to study the situation. It developed that cloths with loud ticks were the only ones favored, so the manufacturer sent to the Congo a consignment of clocks which had such a strident and insistent tick that English clocks were no longer popular. Every hut tried to afford one that would make noise enough to apprise the passerby of the owner's prosperity.

Korea is not the [illegible] of petroleum, but it was a long while before the salesmen could get so much as a foothold in that country. Lamps were looked upon as works of the evil one. Then an artful commercial traveler, knowing the Korean reverence for the moon, declared that the oil was distilled from moonbeams, and that it was a provision of the gods that repeated the light of the moon. Thereafter sales were made fast enough to take his breath away. It was a fable with a good scientific basis, and on this ground the man believes he escaped honorary membership in the Ananias club.

Despite the fact that the majority of American catalogues sent to Spanish-speaking South America are all artlessly printed in English, sales are sometimes made from them. Some years ago there was not a carriage in Tegucigalpa, and the president of Guatemala appealed to the consul there to help him order a carriage whose picture he had seen in a catalogue. He could not read the description, but the picture suited, and he ordered that it be sent just exactly as the picture looked. For once the manufacturers filled the order to the letter, and the carriage came without a tongue. The consul pointed out the mistake to the president, but it was like the picture, so the dignitary was satisfied. The first ride, however, was not a success. The carriage ran hither and yon, and the little mules that drew it were helpless against its rudderless state. Finally the consul borrowed an axe, cut a pole from the woods nearby, and soon rigged up a serviceable tongue, which adorned the carriage of state for many years.

The American Salesman.

The American shoe manufacturer has so far invaded the German markets that his German competitors are getting somewhat uneasy. In Manheim the goods from this country are used to the exclusion of others. Frankfort has had such a scare over the American shoe invasion that the chamber of commerce there has asked for a tariff on American made shoes. The finest shoes ever made were made by an American firm for the pope. Our shipments of beer to Peru have trebled in the last few years. Mexico demands more rebuilt typewriters than we can supply, and Italy has recently ordered engines and cars for the use of the royal family. In the next few years $250,000,000 will be spent on equipment and rolling stock for Italian railroads, and it is safe to say that the American salesman will be able to secure much of the trade for his own land.

Breakfast food is an apt illustration of the Yankee's ability to sell a thing when he really tries. So great is the competition between the manufacturers that the various salesmen must hurry to keep ahead of one another. As a result of their push, they have established a large trade in breakfast food in countries where people have never before eaten breakfast. When this energy is coupled with a still greater determination to find out what people want and cater to them, America will come into her own as the leader in foreign trade, and cause a great and gusty sigh of satisfaction to girdle the world in one glad rush from consular post to consular post.

THE FIDDLE'S INVITATION.

When the winter hills are ghostlike an'
the wind wears lo' wings
I like an invitation from a fiddle f'ondly strings
My dancin' days, oh, my!
Don't you think they've passed me by?
I can dance 'th' very stars out in the sleepy winter sky!

Oh, I'm not so much on springtime, when the sky is dreamy blue
An' your sweetheart pulls the violets an'
pins 'em on for you;
"Giltin' old! Giltin' old!"
That's the story I am told;
Give me winter, an' a fiddle, an' I'll dance away the cold!

Oh, there's nothin' that I'm knowin', or that yet I'm like to know
That cheers me like the cabin lights that twinkle o'er the snow;
The lights that seem to say!
"Come in! an' dance the dark away!"
An' I follow—Oh, I follow till I hear the fiddle play!

The latch hangs on the outside—no trouble at the door!
"Come in, an' join the dancin'!" Shake the white sand on the floor!"
An' my younger days I feel
As I hilt it—to-an'-heel!
An' go whirlin' to the music of the old
"shaina-reel!"

At a fiddle's invitation I'm on hand! The world you see.
By the lively dance it led me made a dancin' chap o' me!
Life's a dance, an' I am in it,
Joy's the prize, an' I must win it,
An' on the road to Happiness I'll make it a [illegible]!

in which the Newsom & Holmes garments excel the common brand of clothes, is the graceful and permanent shapeliness, tailored into each and every garment leaving our shop.

MRS. SOUSA SAVED THE CASH.

From the New York Times.

John Philip Sousa had all the funds of his band on deposit in the New Amsterdam National bank. The manager of the organization reached New York on Wednesday evening from Nashville, where Sousa and his band were playing that night, and hearing of the closing of the bank, telegraphed the news to the conductor, adding:

"We had $30,570 on deposit."

Sousa telegraphed this reply:

"Sorry it isn't an even $30,000; easier to remember."

The best part of the story, however, lies in the sequel. The manager hurried to break the news to Mrs. Sousa, who knows all her husband's business affairs and has his power of attorney. She told the manager that she had heard rumors of the New Amsterdam's growing troubles and had withdrawn all but a few dollars of the Sousa band money at 1:50 that afternoon.

NO OPTION ON THE VINDICATOR

Rumor of Pending Deal Absolutely Groundless, Say Officers.—Annual Meeting Held.

Another "pipe dream" of a jackpot mining deal involving millions, this time concerning the Vindicator mine at Cripple Creek, was dissipated last night by the statement of F. G. Campbell, secretary and general manager of the company, who said that no option had been given on the mine to anyone and that there was absolutely no truth in the rumor that the mine was to be sold.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Vindicator company was held yesterday afternoon in Denver and the story was circulated in the afternoon papers that a deal was pending. "Closed doors" and "absolute secrecy" of course marked the proceedings and the prediction was made that a sale to rival in importance the sale of the Stratton Independence to the Venture company would be completed within a few days. All of this was denied by the officers of the company last night.

The old directors were re-elected at the meeting. The directors held a meeting immediately afterwards and re-elected the old officers as follows: F. L. Stark, president; G. S. Wood, vice president and F. G. Campbell, secretary and general manager.

SCIENTIFIC WATERLESS COOKING

How 20 Per Cent. of the Family Meat Bill May Be Saved — Nutritious Parts of Foods Lost Through Evaporation or Dilution — Evils of the Frying Pan. Some New Dishes.

By Dr. G. Henry Brinkler, Author of "Suitable Foods."

THOUGHTLESS woman, how much trouble you might save yourself! Instead of letting the cauliflower boil away its nazome and fine qualities, through am to find its way to the heavens, y not put on the lid? Better still, n't boil it; put it without water into covered vessel into a moderately ated oven till it is reduced to soft- s in its own juice. Correctly done, will yield many wineglassfuls of e vegetable essence better than nec- , a new vegetable revelation to those o have never tried and tasted.

nstead of this rational method, the ual procedure is to dilute the vegeta- with water and extract its fine ue salts, contaminating these with piece of soda thrown into the pot; l, finally, not even to save the boil- water holding in solution the very ts which should be eaten to mature brain. The vegetable fiber, a ste element, is served on the table. imilarly, to cook meat the housewife often allows the fine juice, the od, the life, the brain-feeding salts, escape in steam to the gods, while man is left the tough meat fiber, norant of his loss and his ill-fed, rving brain, man allows woman to ak her will so long as he gets some- ng to eat.

o cook an old hen it is only nec- ary to put her into a pan, airtight, l place it in a moderate oven till softens and falls from her bones delicately as a young chicken. Roast 'a cooked this way will pass for cken in tenderness. In nutritious ntities it certainly excels, for all the utities of the joint are preserved by airtight vessel.

Glass Utensils Not Effective.

The same effect is not obtained by cing the airtight pan on a stove, amuch as the hot air is not distrib- d evenly and on all sides. Even a ible saucepan is not so good as an ight vessel placed in a moderate n, because the double saucepan is fed from only one side.

ish may be cooked in the same man- thus avoiding the indigestible ase from the frying pan while con- ving the full flavor and strength the fish. The best way for fish, rever, is to put it into a covered inside a covered saucepan of boil- water, as by this A [illegible] the fish not [illegible] flavor and [illegible] m its bones, which might happen h very [illegible].

every article of food should be cooked this way to retain the whole article, and nothing but the article.

The frying pan is the curse of modern America. It came into use with the modern cook stove and hurry-up meals. The old-time housewife, with open fires and big roasting spits, knew nothing of the frying pan and dyspepsia. Not only was she much in the open air, but she did not swallow fat with every piece of cooked food. The miner and prospector cooks most everything he eats in the frying pan. He has little time to boil and no time to bake, but all manner of times to suffer from indigestion. Look at him; a bundle of bones and barren quartz; a wallow lump of indigestion! Tumors, sores and boils seem to bear a strong relation to fried grease. Though proper foods and proper combinations are the reasonable foundations of health, yet the frying pan will blast out the bottom of this foundation.

Learn to avoid fat in cooking. It is a bad habit. The human machine doesn't want so much grease as the wagon wheel. Remember that one drop of oil in a watch will lubricate the works nicely. Put three drops and you clog the machine, collect dust and dirt. Grease in the kitchen, and how much dirt! Grease in the human body, and how much filth! Constipation means filth, and not a little comes from excessive fats; also biliousness.

The worst kind of fat is that of mutton or beef, as it is more dense. When cold it is hard and brittle. Pork fat is softer and more pliable. Bacon fat, for instance, would agree when beef fat would kill. Both are used too much. Even the fat from the top of the gravy should be removed entirely when cold, for the chances are that a person will get enough for lubricating while trying to avoid it.

Banish the Salt Canister.

Stop that salt! There's the cook shaking the salt canister at every opportunity. Why clog with salt and make every one thirsty to take water he would not otherwise need? Salt is good for preserving, but who wants to make a pantry out of his stomach? Salt hardens. Try it on your gums when you clean your teeth. It permeates, petrifies and preserves the meat for storage, making it hard; but why add to the hardness of foods and the difficulty of digestion? Is there not [illegible] in the [illegible] with [illegible] articles of food and unnecessary liquids which unduly strain the kidneys?

But, sir, would you have us forego salt and make our foods insipid? No, my friends; there are many foods which contain salts in an assimilable form without resort always to table salt, the inorganic salt. While many countries esteem salt the greatest luxury, they are not the civilized countries, where plenty of meat, milk, salad vegetables, etc., are eaten. Take when possible the finely organized salts in these articles. When meat is cooked as I direct, these refined organic salts are preserved and will be tasted in the gravy, so that you will often suspect the cook has shaken her canister, in spite of her innocence.

Salt diminished, the thirst will not be excessive, and the work of the kidneys more normal. Waterless cooking will then have a further meaning, and the gastric digestive juices will be able to play their undiluted force on the foods to extract their real nutrition.

Such cooking will also tend to satisfy the craving for many hurtful things, as candies, and tend even to fortify the drunkard against his habitual dram.

Women of America, you drop on your knees to pray, "God keep our loved ones from temptation," and with your own hands you oft pile on the inflaming food which creates the desire. If you know enough you can save your loved ones with your own hands. The responsibility is yours, for it is your hands which are on the mainspring of life, the foundation of existence, the materials of success. Study this subject. Simplify it, and don't intrust all this important obligation to the ignorant cook.

The primitive form of cooking is by direct radiation; by heat through dry air, roasting. It has a slight advantage on account of ventilation, but loses much essence by evaporation. The conductive airtight cooking has already been explained.

Conveying the heat through moisture is done by the steaming, the stewing, or the boiling process. All are objectionable through loss of elements. In steam cooking the steam carries off filth in the shape of the meat and replaces it by water, leaving only the tough fiber and the undesirable water.

Meat Values are Lost.

These wasteful methods of cooking lose perhaps 25 per cent of the meat, thereby much increasing the amount of the meat bills, but the waste of actual money is the least, for it means the part that is lost is the most nutritious and nourishing to the brain, so that perhaps 25 per cent of the meat is lost, if quality is included and the measurement is by effect; and as quality has an appreciable effect on the quality of the man, it is fair to suppose he is 10 per cent less brainy than he might become.

Those who consider their meat bills might do well to order more joints and less chops, for when the meat has been weighed the meat cutter will by trim off a few pounds of fat, the cook trims off another few pounds, while the pots of [illegible] boiling in [illegible] undesirably in fat, so there is not much nourishing meat left around the chop bone. A leg of mutton, for instance, is cheaper not only in price per pound, but in actual quality of lean meat per pound. Cold lean meat can be warmed up in a covered jar placed inside a large covered saucepan of boiling water. To slices of cold lean meat may be added equal weight of tomatoes and apples, mint, etc., to make a healthful Irish stew.

Add a little rice to this hash, and, as no water is used, the mixture will blend with a refreshment unobtainable by other means.

The purse-tight city clerk could open bachelors' hall and obtain comfortable, healthful cooking more easily than he suspects. A man often does not know how to provide for himself, and sometimes waits in helplessness to find a restaurant where, after all, he will receive comparatively poor food at high prices. A small joint of meat can be cooked easily in a portable oven over a tiny gas flame. It may be left all night to tenderly cook enough for the next day. No basting, turning or poking is needed, for the cover will do the basting if it fits well.

A camp oven may be made from a very small, close fitting, thick wooden chest lined with thick asbestos. If into this is put a pot of food at boiling temperature it will retain its heat and cook without further gas or fire, though it requires extra time. By such means a hot breakfast could be prepared just before going to bed. And if the light housekeeping should prevent the use of pies, pastries, puddings, and those seductive delights over which the cook swelters in the heat of a big fire, the human system will be far better off.

Sun Is the Best Cook.

The sun is the best cook, so be sure the fruits and vegetables are matured, that the fire cooking may be less needful. Ripe apples should be bought, even for cooking. There is no object in buying so-called cooking apples of inferior quality and then adding sugar. The most refined kind of sugar is the sugar in the ripened fruit itself. Even a combination with raisins is a more refined method of increasing the sweetness than adding cane-sugar extract.

Figs, prunes, and dried fruits keep more nearly to their original flavor and value when cooked with the minimum amount of water. After being washed in boiling water they may be steamed by placing them in an uncovered jar and placing that in a large covered saucepan of boiling water. Keep the water boiling till the fruit is soft.

Fruit-water drinks may be made by stewing fruits in water and straining, but more fruit and less water usually the better. A brain-worker too busy to eat much fruit will find tomato puree made in this simple fashion to be a most cooling drink in summer.

Dried white bread is made by pulling a fresh loaf to pieces and baking till yellow throughout and so crisp that it will melt on the tongue, this forming the highest form of cereal food for invalids.

If those who would make the most of life learn to love the delights of a suitably nourished body rather than of a distorted taste unsatisfied and full of pernicious cravings because unsulted, then they might agree with Jerome K. Jerome.

"We may talk sentiment as much as we like, but the stomach is the real seat of happiness in this world. The kitchen is the chief temple in which we worship. Its roaring fire is our vestal flame, and the cook is our great high priest, who soothes away all sorrow and all care. Let us eat, drink, (Copyright, 1908, by G. H. Brinkler.) and be merry."

THERE LIFE IS NO JOKE.

From the Outing Magazine.

Normandy and Brittany together are the land of legends and romance, but there is a noticeable difference in the people. The Breton is stalwart in stature and stern and serious in disposition. He has hewed his life out amid the serious things and along the rocky roads. His bronzed face looks austere, but beneath his blue blouse beats a heart warm and true. The primitive simplicity of his life and the intenseness of his religion gives the Breton short view of the frivolities of existence. He carries his religion into his daily life and work and along all the roads are gaudy crucifixes which the peasants never pass without kneeling and crossing themselves.

It is characteristic of all these Brittany folk that they mind their own business. I don't know what the result would be if you were to try a joke on them. I should be afraid to undertake it. Life is a serious problem to the Breton. It is homespun for him even though the rest of France may be arrayed in silks. He has worked out an existence against great odds and it has given him a character and physique which make him notable among his fellow countrymen.

STRANGE FAULT IN HUSTED

In Following Ore Body, It Is Found to Be Heading on a Parallel to the Starting Point.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Feb. 13.—The Union Leasing company, operating on the Husted shaft of the Mabel M. on the east slope of Beacon hill, is shipping on an average of two cars of ore a week. The shipments are averaging $50 to the ton, and the coarse rock runs between $20 and $25 to the ton. Sorting is required.

The ore body is being worked about four feet wide in the schist and on either side of a granite formation. A strange fault has been discovered in drifting on the vein north and east of the Husted shaft. In following the ore body at a [illegible] the vein suddenly turned east and then south on a parallel with the vein, which had already been followed a considerable distance and which had produced no profits since work first commenced several months ago.

It now appears that the vein will lead directly back to the starting point and perhaps west of the shaft to the south, in which event the strike will prove one of the most important in months on that slope of Beacon hill.

LEADVILLE'S JANUARY OUTPUT

Falls a Trifle Below Normal, 55,000 Tons, Being the Amount of Ore Sent Out.

LEADVILLE, Colo., Feb. 13.—During the month of January the mines of the Leadville district shipped approximately 55,000 tons of mineral, about two-thirds of which is shipped in normal times. In addition to the ore that was shipped, it is safe to say that 10,000 tons were taken from the ground and stored into mines, awaiting movement at some time in the future when the condition of the lead market is more favorable.

It is expected that the improvements at the Dolly and Venango smelter at Salida will be completed by the first of April, after which that plant will be able to handle the full capacity of ore, and there will be no hindrance placed on the production of several of the large producers due to the ship to that place at the present time.

REGULAR SHIPMENTS MADE

Mayor Van Tilborg Is Maintaining Good Output From Tilby.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Feb. 13.—Mayor A. Van Tilborg and associates of this city filled out a car of two and a half carloads from their lease on the north block of the Tilby property on the south slope of Bull hill.

The ore was mined from a vein averaging three to [illegible] feet between walls, and results obtained on a good grade are looked upon as [illegible].

The Tilby Mines company is operating on the lease of [illegible] and twenty levels of the property. The operation is being carried on [illegible] and in an orderly fashion, having from 20 to 22 feet between walls and shipments are made at the rate of [illegible] a day. The ore mined at this place has an average value of $17 to the ton.

RICH SHOOT IS ENTERED

Evelyn Leasing Company Is Taking Out High-Grade Sylvanite Ore.

Special to The Gazette.

FLORISSANT, Colo., Feb. 13.—The Evelyn Leasing company, operating on the property of the Pikes Savage Gold Mining company, on Squaw and Raven mountains, [illegible] at Beaver ½ mile, have opened a rich shoot at the fifth level of the mines, [illegible] high-grade sylvanite. The ability to do this will not exceed [illegible] but the ledges will compare [illegible]. The leasing company has been [illegible] for the last [illegible] weeks [illegible] at $20 a ton.

LIVING IN NEW YORK.

It Comes High on Account of Your Neighbors.

From the Broadway Magazine.

The cost of living is given because the standard of living is high. All the good things from the world's markets are brought to the city's doors. Oil of wintergreen comes from Belleville, Illinois, back in the days on the plots where it grows. He is here; they do not offer you strawberries in February at 50 cents one for Angel on Beauty Hill at $15 a dozen. But the best that money can buy is really set before the multitude of the New Yorker. "To the lord of the beautiful ever calling, calling, calling to shipwreck on the coasts of luxury. Whichever way you turn you find it insidiously, relentlessly tempting, the money to tickle through your tingling lower tips. There are arranged the easiest stakes by which you glide to the too expensive. The apartment in the next block is a little more costly than yours, and you take it. The gown that you pass in the shop window is a little higher priced and a good deal better style than the one you had planned, and you get it. Just so, there are miles of apartments and a continuous procession of gowns stretching on beyond these, and before you realize it you are in pursuit, at the top of the pace that your purse strings permit. And lucky you are if you do not go beyond it.

By careful planning to avoid these two disasters, too much rent and too much gowns, a family of two can live comfortably in New York or, more correctly speaking, around New York, on $1,500 a year. If there are many frills or many guests, $2,000 a year is an easier limit.

WORK TO BE STARTED SOON

C. O. D. Leasing Co. Have Nearly Repaired to [illegible] Shaft and Workings.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Feb. 13.—The C. O. D. Leasing co., now operating on the C. O. D. property at the head of Poverty gulch, has completed cleaning out the main shaft and has made the necessary repairs to the shaft house and plant of machinery destroyed by fire several months ago, and development work will be started this week.

The main shaft on the C. O. D. has a depth of 800 feet with levels every 100 feet. During the early days of the district very rich ore was extracted by the owners and later by Winfield S. Stratton, who afterward operated the property under lease. The better grade of mineral was found above the 500-foot level to surface, but the lessees believe with development the ore bodies encountered in the upper workings will be found to be great quantity and as rich in quality as above.

The lessees intend to drive two cross-cuts south and east of the shaft on the 800-foot level with the expectation of cutting several supposedly rich veins believed to intersect the property from the Stratton estate adjoining. The C. O. D. Leasing company, of which Col. T. B. Dubbidge is president, has strong backing.

SHORT SIDE RECKLESS

FORCED TO COVER CONTRACTS AT HIGHER PRICES.

Covering Selling Earlier in Week Proves a Unwise General Outlook Prevailing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The early stock market today presented graphic evidence that an important proportion of the conspicuous selling, which carried prices downwards on Monday and again in the closing dealings on Tuesday, must have been rather reckless operations on the part of [illegible] sellers felt impelled to cover their contracts, they found a scarcity of stocks offering and a rather mercurial upshot of prices resulted. Almost equally striking was the relaxed tone of the market when the needs of the uncovered bears had been satisfied. The inference pointed to is that while the genuine demand for stocks for the present is light, the supply offering in liquidation is also scarce. At occasional intervals there are sales in the market of special stocks that look like liquidation, and this is attributed to some clearing up of loans in connection with adjustments of banking affairs, holding over from the period last fall.

With this exception there does not appear any selling such as would suggest a general inclination amongst owners to reduce their holdings of stocks. Very positive assertions on Monday that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific dividends would be reduced accomplished the free selling of those stocks. The declaration of dividends on these stocks today at unchanged rates, accordingly caught an important short interest uncovered and they were foremost in the advancing tendency. The coalers also were conspicuous. Not a great deal of activity characterized the rise and the subsequent sag was preceded by a period of hesitation and dullness.

Unsettling factors were the pressure on American Smelting and United States Steel, and the weakness of several of the Gould stocks with no apparent support. Speculative operations in American Smelting are large at all times, and their motives difficult to trace, but importance was attached to reports bearing of the retirement of a prominent engineer from the service of the controlling interests in this company. The weakness of the Gould stocks caused the revival of former reports of projects for new financing by those companies.

The day's developments bearing on the general situation were more unfavorable. Stress was laid on the number of western town buyers appearing in the New York wholesale districts. Reports of some additional mill resumptions also were made a feature. The point taken by one of the leading iron trade authorities to depreciate the newspaper reports of plant resumptions as exaggerated had a modifying influence on the impression which these reports cause. A fall in the price of copper, both here and in London, was an incident of the day that did not contribute to hold the prices of securities. Such small inclination as is perceptible to embark in the stock market is held in abeyance by the desire to see the outcome of tomorrow's sale of $50,000,000 New York city 4% bonds. There were operations in the outside market today in these bonds "when and as issued" at quotations from 103⅝ to 104¼, which is higher than the average price which bond experts expect to see the bonds sell for. An average price above par would prove an excess of the common anticipation. A market criterion of investment demand in general, it is believed, will depend on a figure for the New York city bonds higher than 103. That the bonds will be abundantly subscribed for is taken for granted, but more attention is being paid to the price they will bring. There was no revival of strength in the later stock market.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $2,055,000. U. S. bonds were unchanged on call.

GRAIN MARKETS WEAK

GENERAL SELLING OF WHEAT THROUGHOUT SESSION.

May Delivery Sells at New Low Mark for Crop. Corn, Oats and Provisions Weak.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Wheat for May delivery sold on the local exchange today at a new low mark for the crop, the price touching 88¼. At the close the net loss was 1⅝. Corn was down 1@1¼ cents lower, and provisions were off 10 to 15.

The wheat market was weak all day. With the exception of a [illegible] immediately after the opening, when prices rallied moderately on covering by shorts. There was no general selling throughout the session and the market received but little support except from shorts. A decided decline at Liverpool was a weakening influence on the opening, and later the estimate that the shipments from Argentina for the week were 8,000,000 bushels formed a new record for exports from that country, also weakened prices greatly.

Receipts in the southwest again showed a falling off and clearances were liberal, but the foreign news overshadowed everything. The market closed weak. May opened ⅛ to ¼ lower at 88⅝ to 88⅞, sold up to 89⅝ and then declined to 88¼. The close was at 88⅜.

Clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 1,277,000 bushels. Primary receipts were 756,000 bushels, against 1,176,000 bushels on the same day last year.

The corn market withstood the break in wheat until late in the day, when prices declined about one cent on selling. Sentiment early in the day was bullish because of firm cables and unsettled weather in the corn belt. The market closed weak. May opened ⅛ to ¼ higher at 61⅝ to 61¾, sold off to 60¾ and closed at 61⅛@61⅜. Local receipts were 238 cars with none of contract grade.

The oats market was weak along with wheat and corn, cash lighters were the principal sellers. May opened a shade lower at 53¼, sold at 53¼ and declined to 52⅝. The close was at 52⅝. Local receipts, 124 cars.

Provisions were weak all day because of liberal receipts of the hogs, numerous small cases shortly in the alleys, although there was some buying on investment. At the close May pork was off 5c on 91,000 barrels, lard was down 7@10c on 25,000 tubs, but to partially make up for [illegible]

FISHING FOR THE GREAT AMERICAN PLAY

Many Playwriters, but Few Real Plays Are Being Written

From Harper's Weekly.

Mr. Daniel Frohman probably knows as much about the drama, every phase of it, as there is to know. He has made actors and authors. He knows the tinsel from the gold, the bubble reputation; and yet he sat there like some pearl-fisher among his oysters, eating apples and searching among stacks of manuscripts for the great American play. This hopefulness was the most amazing feature of the specimen. The soul-fired which [illegible] struggle and battle, the strong [illegible] disappointment, [illegible] optimism of the [illegible] who knows that some where, hidden among the oysters, lies the pearl.

"Managers get many plays from authors which are well constructed and full of fluidity interest, [illegible] with dramatic logic," he said. "But they do not dig down enough to meet the demand of a modern audience.

"Mr. Frohman [illegible] dragged into his pile of oysters.

"Now, here is a three-act play of great promise," he said. "But it has only one event, spread over three acts, culminating in a single climax. Whereas it should present a series of surprises. So it will have to be returned.

"Are all plays read that are submitted?"

The question was unnecessary. One could see the thought in Mr. Frohman's mind twice. The nonexhaustible "yes" escaped him. Does the fisherman jerk his rod upward when he feels a nibble at the bait? Mr. Frohman resembles everything less than a fisherman, seated in his apartment high over the madding crowds, reading his manuscripts with theoretic patience, and eating apples.

"A play should have continuous action, all the way through," he said.

"I thought the tendency of the modern drama was toward subjective action?"

"When I study to action," said Mr. Frohman, "I don't [illegible] movement and physical play. A successful play must contain conflicting struggle and battle, the strong [illegible] to have with duty, to name the most [illegible] example. The characters may be sitting in their chairs, talking, plotting, [illegible] and still [illegible] purpose. And the action must go beyond its place and bounds, from one place to another. The idea of a play only [illegible] the lowest characters, but it will hold the attention so that you won't know whether there are six or sixty; and two persons upon the stage will hold the audience enthralled, as in the Greek drama. Like the Greek characters, too, they will appear as puppets upon a dark background of necessity, victims of the circumstances which they have helplessly brought into existence.

"How does the American drama stand at present, as contrasted with that of foreign countries?" he was asked. "If it has merit of its own, why do you never prove it?"

"This year we have a cropper. The best of our authors have sold by the wholesale," said Mr. Frohman. "And then the fisherman's optimism broke forth in line. "But I have great hopes of the American drama," he added. "I have produced a great many American plays in the past. As a stock manager, I provide plays from my stores. A play is not a matter of ownership. The question is of obtaining one of sound, wholesome, universal theme."
